All Supplements, as well as the Photos section, contain many color photos. The Policies, Guidelines, and score sheet files are just B&W.

The Guidelines have extra pages already in them so that if you choose to print them out back-to-back each new section will start with an odd-numbered page – i.e. on the right side when you open the book. Suggestion: if you print them 2-sided, I recommend you do so one section at a time to minimize wasted pages if they aren't coming out correctly. Also, experiment to make sure that you know which page numbers to specify for each group you print and how to place the first-printed pages back in your printer so the second side comes out correctly right side up. Finally, if you print the EVEN page sides first and then put them back into your printer to print the odd sides, they will come out perfectly collated.

The color pages (including Supplements) would probably be better printed out using “one-side” format.

There are many changes and corrections to the Guidelines this year plus a lot of additions. Changes to the Guidelines proper can quickly be found by looking for vertical bars in the margins and underlining or strike-through in the text. On a computer screen, insertions will be underlined and in RED type, with deletions struck-through and in BLUE. Not all additions to the Photo section are annotated, but there are many new color photos and the number of photo pages has increased for 2017.
